In 1916, the United States and Great Britain (on behalf of Canada) entered into a treaty protecting migratory birds. In the following 100 years, additional laws have been enacted in each country to protect wildlife, including the Endangered Species Act in the U.S., and the Species at Risk Act in Canada. This 60-minute video-linked CLE program, accompanied by a one-hour hosted networking event, will introduce lawyers and other natural resource professionals to the basics of federal wildlife protection laws in each country, including current issues (e.g., climate change under wildlife laws), criminal and civil liability, and project permitting. Using the grizzly bear, it will include a comparative case study on the implementation and practical effects of each country’s wildlife laws on development projects. All this, plus the opportunity to meet and network with peers, without extensive time and travel.

Presentation by Erika Lambert-Shirzad, Attorney, Borden Ladner Gervais LLP, Vancouver

Wildlife is an integral part of Canadian life and has long held enormous cultural, social, and economic significance to Canadians of all stripes. This presentation will: (1) discuss the evolution of Canadian wildlife law (from the “game management era” to the “wildlife management era” to the modern-day “sustainability era”), (2) provide an overview of key Canadian wildlife statutes, and (3) delve into current trends and challenges in Canadian wildlife law. Using the grizzly bear as a case study, this presentation will also compare and contrast wildlife laws in Canada and the United States.

Presentation by Heidi K. Ruckriegle, Senior Attorney, Wilmer Hale, Denver

In the United States, wildlife law is an evolutionary work in progress. This presentation provides a high-level overview of the political, legislative, and judicial trends that have shaped the formation of the U.S federal wildlife and related environmental laws from the early 19th century to the present. The development of federal wildlife law in some instances has been based on a growing public concern for wildlife and appropriate use of wildlife resources, and in other instances has simply responded, along with other environmental laws, to changing political forces. The presentation will cover emerging issues with a focus on impacts to natural resource and energy clients.

Complimentary refreshments will be served at the local networking events.

Course materials will be provided electronically before the start of the Workshop.
Sixty minutes of CLE credit has been applied for.
ERIKA LAMBERT-SHIRZAD is an Attorney with Borden Ladner Gervais LLP in Vancouver, British Columbia. She has a multi-disciplinary solicitor/litigator practice, with a mix of environmental, municipal, expropriation, and regulatory law. Erika has extensive experience drafting bylaws and policies, conducting legal research, providing legal advice and opinions, and negotiating and drafting agreements. She has also acted as counsel in legal proceedings before administrative tribunals and in civil litigation, judicial review, and injunction proceedings before all levels of British Columbia courts. Erika has provided advice to both governmental authorities and private individuals and corporations regarding the rights, status, and protection of wildlife and liability flowing from the contravention of Canadian wildlife statutes.

HEIDI K. RUCKRIEGLE is a Senior Associate with Wilmer Hale in Denver, Colorado. She focuses her practice on energy, environment, and natural resources law. She has experience in advising clients across a broad spectrum of industries, including renewable energy, recreation, mining, and oil and gas, on a variety of regulatory issues that arise during permitting, development, and compliance. Heidi's experience also includes assisting clients in litigating matters before state and federal agencies and courts.
